

SEATTLE'S SHOW IS OPEN

Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition Was Opened to the World Today By President Taft.

(Herald Special.)
Seattle, Wash., June 1.—The rites which present the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition to the world were performed today with all the dignity and splendor befitting such an occasion. From the White House President Taft started the electric spark which communicated the energy to the shafting of machinery hall, and amid the tumultuous shouts of thousands, the music of numerous bands and the waving of flags, the wheels began to turn. The great fair designed to exploit the industries and resources of the Far West, Alaska and the Pacific island possessions of the United States was an accomplished fact.

An event of such magnitude could not have been initiated under more favorable auspices. Everything moved with the smoothness of a well regulated military family, amid all the music, the firing of salutes, the cheers of the great throngs, and the animated scenes in and about the handsome and imposing structures composing the exposition.

Seattle was early astir in anticipation of the great event. Long before 8 o'clock this morning, the hour fixed for the admittance of the public, the street cars on the Wallingford, Eastlake and other lines leading from the downtown section to the exposition grounds were filled to capacity. Before the gates had been opened an hour it was apparent that the estimated attendance of 100,000 for the day was likely to be exceeded. The various structures on the grounds were crowded early in the day, and toward noon the scene was one of general activity. Everything was in motion. The white buildings glittered in gay decorations, the visitors carried flags in their hands, and everything throughout the two hundred acres washed on one side by the rippling waters of Lake Washington and on the other by Lake Union presented the appearance of a magnificent opening hour.

The program of the day was ushered in promptly at 9 o'clock with a mighty boom of cannon, fired in martial salute by a mounted battery. This was the signal for the formation of a military and naval parade through the exposition grounds. The procession comprised United States cavalry and infantry, sailors and marines from Admiral Sebree's Pacific fleet and a detachment from Admiral Hichi's Japanese squadron.

The formal ceremonies began in the exposition amphitheatre promptly at 10:30 o'clock. Occupying seats on the platform were the officials and guests of the exposition. Included among the latter were Lieutenant Governor James Dunsen of British Columbia, Governor W. S. Hoggatt of Alaska, Governor J. H. Brady of Idaho, Governor F. W. Benson of Oregon, Governor Gillett of California, Governor William Spry of Utah and Governor M. E. Hay of Washington.

At a signal from Director General Nadeau, while the guests were being seated, Innes' Band of Chicago played "America." The enthusiasm was intense. Thousands cheered and waved their flags. Some time was necessary to restore order. Then Bishop O'Dea of Seattle opened the formal exercises by invoking the divine blessing.

Director General Nadeau made a brief introductory address and was followed by the other speakers on the program. These included James J. Hill and Congressman Rodenberg. At the conclusion of Mr. Hill's address greetings were exchanged between President Taft and President J. E. Chilberg of the exposition.

The amphitheatre was electrically connected with the telegraph room of the White House and President Taft pressed the button—which in this case was made of Alaska marble and ornamented with nuggets of solid gold—that started the wheels in machinery hall and thus actually opened the great exposition.

An artillery salute was fired immediately after the receipt of the message from President Taft and this was followed by a beautiful daylight pyrotechnical display. Meanwhile the guests of honor adjourned to the New York state building, where an official luncheon was served. The guests numbered nearly three hundred and included the visiting governors, mayors of the surrounding cities and others who have contributed toward the success of the exposition.

Unlike most of its predecessors the Seattle exposition opens complete in every detail. All of the construction work was finished several weeks ago. The debris removed, the walks, flower beds, fountains, statuary and other works of ornamentation completed, and the exhibits installed. Throughout its vast extent the big fair opens with every feature in readiness for the welcome and entertainment of the tens of thousands of visitors who are expected to pass through its gates this summer.

Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition.

Artists who had an opportunity to see the grounds and buildings of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition before the official opening day, were delighted with its scenic and architectural features and did not hesitate to declare it the most beautiful exposition ever seen in this country. The management spared no cost to bring about this result and spent more than $15,000,000 on the buildings, grounds and other features of the exposition.

Plan of the Exposition.

The main buildings of the exposition are grouped around the Cascades and geyser basin. They include the large government building at the head of the basin, to the north and, symmetrically disposed on both sides of the basin the Alaska, Hawaii, Fisheries, Mines, Agriculture and Manufactures buildings. Back of Agriculture Hall, toward "The Pay Streak," which is the equivalent of Chicago's "Midway," is the Foreign Exhibits building, while in a similar position back of the Manufactures building is the King County Exposition Hall. Between the building for foreign exhibits and "The Pay Streak" is the Canadian building and east of the King county building are located Machinery Hall and its annex, a structure of the same size as Machinery Hall. At the southern end of the basin are the Music Pavilion and the buildings of China and Japan, surrounded by native villages and other outdoor exhibits.

The large space at the southern end of the grounds, between Lake Union and Lake Washington contains the stadium, which has a seating capacity of more than twelve thousand, the model farm and the stock exhibit. In the extreme northeastern corner of the grounds is the natural amphitheatre, around which are grouped the large Forestry building, several state buildings, the buildings of Oregon, Michigan, Washington, New York, Chicago, California, Missouri, the Arctic Brotherhood, Chehalis, Spokane and the Philippines. Many of the buildings are permanent structures and will later become part of the University of Washington. The enormous Auditorium, the Fine Arts building and several administration and service buildings are grouped in the northwestern part of the grounds. Idaho has its building close to the Fine Arts building.

"The Pay Streak."

The amusement features of the exposition, upon which a great deal of thought has been spent, are grouped around what is called "The Pay Streak." It contains the usual attractions which were seen at nearly every one of the large expositions and in addition many new features or less common ones. There is a village of Siberian Eskimos, an Igorroto village, the "Oregon Trail," representing pioneer life in the northwest, a Spanish theatre and a large arena with a seating capacity of four thousand, where during the exposition athletic contests of all kinds will be held. Another interesting feature is the representation of a Klondike placer mine and representations of scenes along the Yukon trail.

Many Interesting Exhibits.

This is the first exposition which has not asked financial assistance of the government. The government, however, has not neglected this fair, but has spent more for its buildings and exhibits there than at any previous exposition. The total cost will exceed $600,000. The Alaskan exhibit is one of the most interesting, owing partly to the fact that it represents a territory but little known in the states east of the Rocky Mountains. Many of the states have erected fine buildings. The largest state building is that of California, which is constructed in mission style. Two other buildings of unusual interest and of attractive appearance are the forestry building and the immense log cabin built by the Arctic Brotherhood. Both buildings will later be used by the University of Washington.

Another remarkable feature of the exposition is the fine collection of totem poles from Alaska and the magnificent Exposition Monument, eighty feet high and covered with many thousand dollars worth of virgin gold from the Yukon country. All through the grounds restaurants, rest rooms, drinking fountains and other conveniences for the visitors have been liberally provided and the lighting arrangements are excellent in all parts of the grounds.

Loyal Helpers.

The Herald employees are the most loyal in the country, as they make the interest of the Herald their interest. The management is indebted to every one of them, from the highest to the lowest. Had it not been for co-operation and hard work on the part of all this edition would not be the success that it is.

A NEW $40,000,000 BANK

Reorganized Institution Will Be Known as the Carnegie Trust Company of New York.

(Herald Special.)

New York, June 1.—Establishment of a new $40,000,000 banking institution in this city will result from the annual meeting and election of officers of the Carnegie Trust company today. The reorganized institution, which will continue to be known as the Carnegie Trust company, resulted from the purchase of a controlling interest in the Van Norden Trust company, the Nineteenth Ward Bank and the Twelfth Ward Bank. Its deposits will number over thirty-three thousand. The new board of directors includes representatives of all four institutions. Charles C. Dickinson, who organized the Carnegie Trust company, heads the new financial Titan, which becomes one of the largest of its kind in the United States. The consolidation is the culmination of a long battle of wits and dollars between the Carnegie Trust company and the Empire Trust company, in which the former was the victor.

HE AGREES TO BE GOOD

Takes an Oath Before the Marriage Ceremony Is Pronounced—Will Be Kind to Mother-in-Law.

New York, May 31.—A woman married a man in Montclair yesterday and she thinks she is going to keep him at home. Justice of the Peace Williams married the couple. He would not give their names, but he gave out the following document that the man had to sign before the ceremony was performed:

"I solemnly swear before the justice of the peace and the woman I have asked to be my wife to give her my pay envelope unopened every Saturday; to be at home every night by 9 o'clock unless my wife is out with me; never to go to parties without her and never to dance with anybody else without her permission.

"I promise to be kind always to her mother; never to join any lodge that does not admit women; never to smoke more than three cigars on a week day and not more than five on Sunday; never to smoke cigarettes at all and never to use profane language; to beat carpets every spring without grumbling; to do the laundry package each week; to drink intoxicating liquors only on the annual spring house cleaning, and never to keep a dog."

What's in a Name?

An old German wearing a faded blue coat and a campaign hat limped into the office of a palatial dog and horse hospital, bequeathed by a humane millionaire to the town of X.

"I wish to be admitted to this hospital," he announced to the superintendent. "I've got heart trouble. I'm a G. A. R. man and I can prove it."

"But you can't enter this institution, my good man."

"Sure I can. I fight at Gettysburg. I had got a week heart efer since. I can prove it."

"Yes, but you can't enter this hospital; it's a—"

"Can't huh? Vy not? I vas a soleher. I can prove it."

"But this is a veterinary hospital."

Pie and Penalty.

"Jimmy," said the fond mother to her smart 11-year-old, "what became of that little pie I made for you as a treat yesterday? Did you eat it?"

"No, mamma," answered Jimmy, with a grin; I gave it to my teacher at school instead.

"That was very nice and generous of you, Jimmy," complimented his mother. "And did your teacher eat it?"

"Yes, I think so," answered Jimmy. "She wasn't at school today."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

DISPLAY SEIZED GOODS

Total Value of Smuggled Goods Estimated at Fifty-Four Thousand Dollars—Much Lingerie.

New York, June 1.—A display of feminine finery and fripperies beautiful enough to turn all the women of New York green with envy, was shown today in the Custom House and attracted a horde of elegantly clad would-be shoppers. The exhibition consists of a portion of the five trunks of gowns and costumes seized on the American Line pier. The total value of the smuggled goods is estimated at $54,000.

Following today's display, which includes fifty-seven varieties of elaborate shirt waists, the auction sale will begin tomorrow and will continue with unabated vigor until June 12.

The seizure attracted unusual notice at the time it was made as it was stated that secret offers of large sums of money approximating $200,000 were made to the authorities to drop criminal inquiry and prosecution of the smugglers.

Changed the Tactics.

"Well, son, I tried it once," replied Mr. Sullivan. "A husky young man took one lesson from me and went home a little the worse for wear. When he came around for his second lesson he said: 'Mr. Sullivan, it was my idea to learn enough about boxing from you to be able to lick a certain young gentleman that I've got it in for. But I've changed my mind. If it's all the same to you, Mr. Sullivan, I'll send this young gentleman down here to take the rest of my lessons for me.'—Everybody's Magazine

Diplomacy.

A couple of little South Side children, Arthur, 3 years, and Louise, 2 1/2 years old, were disputing over a string which Louise claimed. All threats and force on Arthur's part were useless; she would not give up. After a moment he used guile. "Wees," he said, "will you be my little wife?"

"Ess," she coyly answered.

"Then give me the string," he commanded.

And she gave it without a murmur. —Independent.
